

Friends,

I just wanted to share with you a few words in light of the tragic terrorist events that have occurred today.

It is still hard to believe that such an attack has been made. The loss of life and the attack on freedom turns the inner man inside out. It is truly a day of intense emotions and drives many to their knees in prayer and their eyes to tears. In many of my encounters today there is fear, there is unbelief, there is sorrow, and there is the question of why.

I expect that over the next few days we will start to see and feel the effects of this tragedy on a global scale. The world as we know it will never be the same again. This is very close to home, and we do not know what will be the total result. Let us move forward in faith, and be encouraged in our hope for a brighter tomorrow.

I hope you will join me in praying for:

- the safety, peace, and healing for your families and communities
- the US nation as they decide how to act based on these malicious events
- the families of all afflicted
- the strength and generosity of those volunteers helping at the scenes
- those who have family/friends in Washington or New York
- those who have family "stranded" because of flight cancellations

Here's a few small ways YOU can help:

- listen to someone who is afraid
- comfort someone who is facing loss
- extend a help to someone who needs assistance
- hug someone close and tell them you love them
- have a personal moment of silence for those directly affected

I have gone home early today to be with my family and will be joining with our church at a prayer vigil this evening. I hope that you in your own heart will pray for peace and healing for the nation.

God Bless, Keep, and Comfort you in this time of tragedy.

Thank You

Sincerely;

Timothy Ross
